

I am opposed to the proposal that Low Power FM stations be given priority over FM Translator stations in allocation of frequencies. In my area, Jacksonville, Florida, the local radio stations that were playing certain contemporary Christian music were sold and ceased to play that style of music. Air 1 Radio, a satellite-based network, then began broadcasting this style of music over a lower powered station at 89.5 FM. Were it not for Air 1 Radio I would not have access to this style of music in my local area. Other FM stations in the area, both full power and low power, have not shown interest in broadcasting this style of music, indeed they have pulled back from broadcasting it. If Air 1 Radio were to lose their station in Jacksonville, I feel I would not be able to hear this music on local airwaves. I believe Air 1 Radio serves the public interest in the greater Jacksonville, Florida, area by broadcasting a style of music that would not otherwise be heard. I urge the FCC to reconsider the proposal to allow low power stations to have priority over translator stations. Thank you for your time and consideration.
